

President's Perspective

The ski season is officially underway! Well, not around here just yet, but there has been some decent November skiing Up North. We had our coldest Thanksgiving Day since 1956 (according to Tom Skilling), and the extended forecast is hinting at a possible big snow around here during the second week of December (I'll believe it when I see it).

For the past few months, while others have been roller skiing and dry land training, I've been focused on training for the Las Vegas marathon on December 4. By the time you read this, the race will be over, and I will have joined the others in switching my focus to skiing. Which reminds me that I need to buy some new poles, have my skis stone ground, put on a fresh coat of wax, sign up for the UP trip, sign up for the Birkie, etc. etc.

Hope to see you at the club Christmas party on the 15th, and on the ski trails throughout the winter!
